parliament: Recent Scandals

Plans to subsidize political parties with taxpayers' money have been discussed here for years. But a chain of scandals implicating politicians during the last fex months led to quick agreement ou proposals to have the state finance the parties.

A special parliamentary conmission is at present investigating allegations that the petroleum industry has for years been paying huge kickbacks to political parties in return for fiscal privlleges and favors.

The law that was passed today prohibits financial donations to political groups by state-controlled agencies and companies Private business concerns may lawfully donate funds to political parties only if such contributions are entered in their balance sheets.

'Black Funds'

In the past, large sums were allegedly given to political par-ties by state-owned combines and hy state-controlled and private companies out of so-called "black funds" for which they did not account to regulatory agencies or stockholders.

The state subsidies will be apportioned under a system that will give about $25 million a year to the Christian Democratic party. Italy's largest political group: about $18 million to the Communist party, and smaller amounts to the other six groups

The money will cover only a fraction of the parties' estimated hudgets. The major political groups all maintain large organizational machines with many financing newspapers, news agen-

Relegates Russia to Secondary Role

Sadat Says He'll Follow U.S. In Seeking Peace in Mideast

By Henry Tanner

CAIRO, April 17 (NYT).-President Anwar Sadat has reaffirmed his intention to work through the United States in seeking settlement of the Middle East conflict. He also made it clear that in his eyes the Soviet Union has been relegated to a secondary role.

This position emerged from remarks the President made yesterday to a group of several hundred Egyptian students living abroad. The remarks were reported by Egyptian newspapers this morning.

The President revealed that at one point his disenchantment with Moscow had reached the point where he came close to renouncing the 1971 friendship treaty with the Soviet Union. but at the last moment he decided against such a step, according to the newspapers.

He declared that his meetings with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger had convinced him that the United States had become "the baste factor" in the Middle East and that it would be futile to try to obtain a solution without first setting relations straight with Washington.

Moscow, a 'Branch' "If the United States is the root, why should we go to the branches?" the President said, according to the daily Al Akhhar. One of the "branch thought to be Moscow, "branches" was

Mr. Sadat also warned that Egypt's rockets were permanently aimed at three Israeli cities and that Egypt had massed an over whelming force of armor on the west bank of the Suez Canal ready to cross if an attack were made necessary by Israeli raids on Lebanon and Syria, papers reported

The Fresident's sincement about the missiles paralleled a similar declaration he mado at the time of the October war. Foreign diolomats at the time said the President probably was referring to the Zafir. a rocket that was bullt in the sixties with the help of East German experts but that was not thought to have been provided with warheads.

The President': remarks yesterday were regarded as an implied warning that Egypt would be forced to renew the war if Israel attacked Lebanon or Syria. Warning to Syria

Yet another passage of the President's statement to the students sounded more like a warning to Syria and Moscow than to Israel.

Mr. Sadat called himself an "Egyptian nationalist," a term sometimes used in distinction to "Arab nationalist." "I want to solve Egypt's problems and I have no problems rcgarding Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai" Mr. Sadat said, according to Al Akhbar. Foreign diplomats interpreted this to mean that Egypt could obtain the evacuation of most of the Sinai hy Israel even if there was no troop disengagement on the Syrian front. When Mr. Kissinger was last here in February. American officials privately predicted a second-stage Taracli withdrawal in the Sinai before the end of the year.

Egypt's official position reiterated many times by Mr. Sadat is that disengagement on the Strian front must be the next step, followed by political talks in Geneva, and that Egypt will never enter into a separate scttlement.

No Explanation Mr. Sadat did not explain why

UN Debate Raises Conflicts On Development, Resources

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., April needed by countries hardest hit by rising fertilizer and oil prices. 17 (AP).--Conflicts between rich and poor nations, oil producers and oil consumers, socialist and capitalist countries, and between China and the Soviet Union have emerged in the last two days of the special UN debate on dcvelopment and resources.

Three Arab off-producing countries, Kuwait, Iraq ano Saudi Arabia, demanded yesterday that the industrialized powers bear the responsibility for easing economic hardship among the needy nations. They said that they were already giving substantial aid and, proportionally, more than many industrialized countries.

ernment troops sent from Phuom Penh to recapture Outong were reported stranged or cut off by Khmer Rouge insurgents holding the banks of the Tonle Sap River. The government forces were in two groups, about 20 miles northvest of Phuom Penh and about two miles farther north, and the government was trying to figure ow to extracate them.

On the coast, government troops pushed rebel forces a mile back from the besieged town of Kampot, the Phuom Penh command said, but the four-mile shipping channel that is Kampot's only land-supply route was still closed by the Klumer Rouge, and supplies were being parachuted to the government garrison.

about this case. Mr. Kleindienst would not deny them flatly. Mr. Kleindienst's testimony testified he had had with him followed the conclusion of Mr. Mitchell's three days in the witness chair, and with it Mr. Mitchell's defense rested. Mr. Mitchell's co-defendant, former Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans, took the stand this morning in his own defense.

So far. 14 other defense sses have been called and, somewhat unusually in a trial of this sort, none of them were "character witness" — that is witnesses who would testify to the honor and integrity of Mr.

The apparent reason for this is that Mr. Mitchell faces at least one other criminal trial after this and any witness called by him as a character witness would be subjected to government ques-tioning about the other case, thereby alerting the jury that another action was pending.

Mr. Mitchell has been indicted in Washington for conspiracy to cover up the Watergate break-in.

Dean, a former counsel to President Nixon, had testified that he received a telephone call from Mr. Mitchell, who told him that the panel that investigated this case was a "runaway" grand jury, and asked him to call Mr. Kleinger, and probane interfere with nienst and perhaps interfere with that grand jury.

This was the grand jury that indicted Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Stans, who were leaders of the Nixon re-election campaign, on charges of conspiracy, perjury and obstruction of justice. They are alleged to have attempted to unpede and quash a Securities and Exchange Commission inves-tigation of Robert Vesco, a financier who is now a fugitive. in return for a secret $200,000 cash contribution that Mr. Vesco made to the re-election campaign.

Peter Fleming jr., Mr. Mitcbell's lawyer, in a quick direct examination, asked Mr. Kleindienst if he had received such a telephone call from Dean on March 20, 1973.

"I have no recollection of any such call from Mr. Dean," the witness replied. He also said he had no recollection of any conversation with Dean on "this subject matter."

After the Crisis

worsening energy problem remains.

The United States like other industrialized countries has oeen living beyond its means. ecologically speaking. It is not only importing oll, a dwindling resource, but it is also increasing its use of energy in its various forms by roughly 5 percent a year. This increases the demand for nuclear power plants. But where to dump the radioactive wastes? This increases the pressure to drill for offshore oil. But how to guard the ocean against oil spills? This intensifies the interest in strip mining for coal, but can the ravaged lands be restored and will

As these questions indicate, the energy problem and the environmental problem are to a considerable extent the same problem viewed from different perspectives. The gasoline shortage has served to alert Americans that their energy-wasting ways are reckless and that it would be prudent to make some changes.

But there is no consensus as to what those changes should be. Instead, the brief crisis collapsed the authority of those who might have been expected to provide leadership. To their dismay, the oll companies have discovered that many people believe they invented the crisis for dark conspiratorial reasons of their own. Although the companies have gained windfall profits from the sudden rise in prices, there is no evidence or logic to suggest that they deliberately plotted the recent unsettling events in their business.

The energy scare further damaged President Nixon's credibility. His proclaimed goal of energy self-sufficiency by 1980 is a patently unattainable objective. Even over a somewhat longer span of time, self-sufflclency could not be reached without a steady effort to reduce energy consumption, a risky subject on which the President is thunderously silent. Meanwhile, Nixon during the energy scare abandoned his demonstrated concern for ecological values with indecent haste.

The President now brushes aside every problem-smog from auto emissions and coal-burning power plants, destruction of the land by strip mining and urban sprawl, danger from the radioactive waste of nuclear plants, and contamination of the ocean from

The off crisis is over. But the serious and off-shore oil drilling-in the name of increasing energy supplies.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz.. and other conservation-minded members of Congress suggest that Nixon is playing "impeachment politics" with these problems. They point out that his hardcore supporters in an impeachment showdown are the same rightwing members of the House and Senate who also oppose a national land use policy oc any other restraint on individual and corporate profit-seeking in the exploitation of natural resources.

The energy scare not only exposed the hollowness of Nixon's commitment to ecological values out also demonstrated the profound disarray of government agencles supposedly coping with energy and environmental

A Federal Energy Office had to be improvised. An interagency study group headed by William O. Doub, a member of the Atomic Energy Commission, has now proposed a National Energy Council to provide "general policy guldance" to regulatory agencies. The prospect of subsuming a vast range of difficult problems under a single umbrella marked "energy" naturally disturbs agencies which have diverse responsibilities such as the Environmental Protection Agency, whose administrator, Russell Train, would like to see his agency expanded into a cabinet-level Department of the Environment. That would be a logical evolution if Congress and the administration could also agree on the decades-old idea of making Interior into a Department of Energy and Resources.

Changes in structure though desirable are less important than a recognition by the American people and the leadership of both parties that the limits set by the natural environment cannot be transcended or permanently exceeded. Economic gain and environmental safety are not alternatives: the environment sets the conditions and determines the cost of any economic gain.

Nations like individuals would like to escape those costs or pass them on to someone else. The great energy scare was a reminder to Americans that no escape is possible and a warning that the day of reckoning for an oll-dependent, energy-wasting society may be nearer than anyone would like.

Oil Producers' Burden

Eastern oil-producing countries are grad- troversial issues that have long separated the ually awakening to the wisdom and the necessity of spreading some of their windfall riches among their less-blessed Third World partners. Regrettably the amounts of new development capital now under oiscussion still represent only a fraction of the anticlpated need.

So far, the various aid programs from the oil producers are fragmented, without any institutional coordination. Many of the programs seem hedged and manipulative, plagued with national rivalries and blds for partisan advantage. No less than 10 separate assistance programs have been announced by the oil producers. An effort by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to present a joint aid package to the current special session of the UN General Assembly has yet to reach the level of a commitment.

An implicit tension between the oil-rich nations and the hard-pressed consumers of the developing world is growing outside the assembly hall, sheltered by the rhetoric from

A new analysis by the World Bank stresses that while all oil consumers have been hit by the 400 percent increase in oil prices last year, it is the developing countries whose economies are most threatened. According to this assessment, the additional capital requirements arising from the increase in oil and other commodity prices will reach $10 hillon over the next two years. Syria and the Russians

While Egypt has clearly decided to pursue a course of peace along the lines of Henry Kissinger's concepts, no such decision has been taken in Syria. The Russians are trying to steer the Syrians along the Kremlin's particular "path of peace"-but they are evidently not so much interested in attaining a viable compromise settlement as in dominating at least the Syrian piece on the Mideast chessboard and moving it in the war that sults them best. -From the Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich).

U.S. British Relations

There is something ironic about the Labor government's current attachment to the United States. Washington, especially Presldent Nixon's Washington, Is not the most obvious capital to which one would have expected Labor ministers to turn. . . . This government, the foreign secretary said last week, will give greater emphasis than its predecessor to relations with Washington. If this is ironic, it is also naive and possibly dangerous. In the first place, there was nothing wrong with Anglo-American relations under the Tories. . . . Secondly, most of the international issues in which Britain and the United States are involved go we'l beyond the scope of bllateral relations so there is a limit to how much the two countries can solve together. Thirdly, it is on the few remaining bilateral issues that under a Labor government Anglo-American relations could go awry. . . .

In foreign policy terms, America's chief Interest in Britain is as part of Europe. Yet it is just this European connection which the new government is seeking to weaken through renegotiation of British membership of the European Common Marketi. . . unless one assumes that the object of Amerlean policy is to break up the Community. It is hard to see how this can make Britain a favored ally of the United States. . . . -From the Financial Times (London).

TUG. Switzerland.—If one part of the current U.S. energy scenario comes true, Henry Kixsinger this spring will lead Eu-rope and Japan—be would like to lead all oil importers—into consultations with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to seek some new pattern, interdependent and mutually advantageous, for the world oil trade.

If another part of the same scenario comes true, the United States will thereafter put itself into a position, as soon as possible, to cease being an oil importer at all.

For the United States, there is nothing contradictory about this. The two are not even presented as alternatives. A believable resolve to attain self-sufficiency in energy cannot weaken America's bargaining power as an oil importer. Economically, it cannot strengthen this immediate bargaining power much elther, since "Project Independence," at the least, would take several years. But Mr. Kissinger's bargaining power about oil imports this year will not bave much to do with economics. Here as elsewhere, it will be based on Realpolitik.

Lucky Ones

However, Americans need to bear in mind that this option is not open to most other large oil importers. Two or three other lucky ones—Holland. Australia, scon Britain—can also achieve self-sufficiency in energy. The rest-notably most of Europe and Japan-cannot avoid beavy conoil and gas. These countries' immediate energy situations parallel those of the United States. But It does have enough resources at home to fuel eventually, all its own needs at a high cost, but one that current trends in oilimport prices may make bearable. Most of its partners in "Atlantic-Japanese energy" haven't this op-

This is a real distinction within any lineup of the industrialized oil importers. It relates specificalif to energy, and has nothing to do with the extraneous political irritations and resentments that have embittered so much Atlantic cross-taik since the Washington energy conference. It need not prevent an effective unity in these importers' arguments with OPEC this year. In the short run, American, European and Japanese interests in crude oil prices and how to pay them overisp very considerably.

But "Project Independence," taken at face value, postulates reducing U.S. imports straight away: obviating any need for them by 1980; and making the United States a potential net exporter of energy by 1985. Even to start with, U.S. imports are only about 8 percent of its total energy use. For the Common Market rations, the most one can hope is to bring the share of imported energy down from about 62 to 43 percent by 1985; for Japan, perhaps from 75 percent to about half. So this current identity of interest as oil importers could theoretically soon narrow, perhaps towards the vanishing point.

European, and Japanese do not, in fact, take "Project Indepenquite at face value. But is still fascinates them. (It has technical feasibility, that is: not the contrived and shaky crithmetic of its timetable. If the United States undertakes this huge task, they believe it can be done. Possible foreign repercussions, especially on importers who cannot opt out, are being studied carefully. (And a good deal more enthusiastically than these other importers, 16 months ago, were contemplating zoother oil option open to the United States—the special arrangement" with Saudi Arabia that Sheikh Yamani proposed in the autumn of 1972.

All May Benefit

Its side-effects on oil bargaining, for American and for all importers, may be complex. If self-sufficiency were simply an alternative, to be chosen u reliance on imports looked too forgooe may be a much bigger costiy and too dangerous. It could enhance American bargaining extra investment in local energy. power, for the United States itself And both, incidentally, represent and for others. Exporters might real resources, diverted or sacrifictiunk more secure guarantees and ed. Until ail OPEC countries can lower prices well worth while to absorb all their rocketing revolues gain or hold such huge business, in real resources within their That could benefit everybody-all economies, part of oil's import

"costs" to the industrialized West This is another article of a series, being published in the Inwill simply be promises of future ternational Herald Tribune, on payment with no transfer or the problems and differences of Europe-U.S. relations. The series real resources at all. But if there are hidden costs to self-sufficiency in energy, these may offer the importers too some hidden flexibility in their bargaining. Advanced economies do not sacrifice real growth cheerfully. If they could see more dependable supplies and more predictable prices - preferably somewhat lower—for imported oil, there would be a margin of flexibility in their import planning. Even if they developed most of the local energy they have in mind, they need not forgo as much economic growth.

However firm the political commitments of "Project Independence," therefore, there can be some flexibility for the future in the importers' bargaining that Mr. Kissinger hopes to lead. These im-porters' interests are not automatically identical, and may diverge more widely. Exporters' interests, economic and political, aren't automatically identical either (though importers and oil companies can no longer count so optimistically on splits within OPEC). If these consultations with OPEC can be pot together this spring, the economic and political bargaining strength will be oddly distributed. But each side has considerable latitude; and neither has blocked too many options for the other in advance. Both are necessary—though not sufficient—conditions for effective bargaining.

Ford's Big Problem: His 'Good Guy' Quality

By James Reston

WASHINGTON, - Vloe-President Ford keeps saying ha is not a candidate for the presidency, but keeps talking like a candidate, and in the process he is stumbling into trouble.

It is the "good guy" quality in Ford that is getting him in trouble. He is an houest and sympathetic character in a tough and almost impossible job. He wants to please the President. who picked him out for a historic role at an awkward time. So he defends the President in public on Watergate, without reading the documents and the evidence.

At the same time, he wants to be faithful to his old buddies in the House and Senate, who are considering the impeachment of his boss, and when they talk to him in the night he tells them about his fears and doubts about how the President is handling the impeachment crisis.

To Reassure

The Republican party wants reassuring the falthful that every-thing is going to come out all right and he wears himself out flying all over the Republic. But after his standard speeches, he has to meet the local press, and get back on his plane and travel for hours with the Washington reporters, who are following him to find out what kind of man he is and what kind of president he would make. So he talks to them too the way he always has in his 25 years in the House. He is not a cal-culating man. He has always talked freely to reporters. He likes them, and he never had many state secrets to conceal. And they ask him what he would do if by accident he became president, what kind of cabinet he would have? What about Kissinger at State, Schlesinger at Defense, Ziegler in the White House? And he answers their questions, not taking himself seriously, and not thinking about the consequences. The consequences, of course, are serious. Next day it is all over the front pages and on the tube that the Vice-President was sure that the President was "innocent, that the documents would prove it, though he hadn't read them. Also, that he thought the Republicans would do all right in the November elections despite Watergate, then the next day, that he was worried about the political effects of Watergate.

Beyond that, he had tried to get a compromise between the White House and the Congress on the tapes, and avoid a House subpoega and a "confrontation" between the executive and the legislature, but had failed. And, still insisting that he would not run for the presidency, that he would keep Kissinger and fire Schlesinger and Ziegler, if by accident he did have to replace the White House was sore, and even Gerry's friends wondered about his judgment, but maybe indiscretions and blunders like this were inevitable for a man like Ford. In a way, he is the sopposite of Nixon. He is a natural and spontaneous char. acter, and he is getting in trouble now, not because of his bad instincts but because of his good instincts.

In fairness to the Vice Presi dent, part of his problem maybe the main part, is that he was chosen to be the second man to the President, to stand in line for the presidency, but was not given the opportunity to prepare los

He was not really brought in on the major questions before the President. The members of the cabinet did not invite him to share their problems, because, if they did, they might seem to be preparing him to succeed to the presidency. So he was left like Agnew, to be a propagandist for the President and the party, and he did what he had always done: He gave the old party hurrah, but being more hones than most politicians, he gave honest answers to hard question after the party rally was over. This may not be a tribate to Ford's judgment, but it is tribute to his integrity. There has always been a question around here about whether it was better to have an honest naive man or an intelligent and cunning manipulator, and Ford has demonstrated that he is not very smart but that he is honest.

Learned Lesson

Meanwhile, he has learned his lesson. It is too bad in a way because what this town needs a few straight characters, even if they get in trouble, but he will be more careful from now on. I hadn't quite occurred to him that his life had changed, that be was being regarded as a possible pre-ident, and therefore that what he said was news, not only m Grand Rapids but in the country and the world.

From now on, he will probably be different. He has always went. ed to retreat and learn his job quietly in the departments but the President has never really given him the chance. In a way he knows himself better than anybody else. He would like to be obscure and live in bis little suburban house in Alexandria and just stick around and learn in case he was needed, but nobody in the White House suggested

Everybody is entting him up now, in the White House, the party, and the press but his mistakes have been the mistakes of a decent man, and if the White House finally gives him a decent and private job of learning the problems of the presidency, he is the kind of man who would gladly disappear and

Mr. Nixon and His Critics

By William F. Buckley Jr.

NEW YORK-Mr. Nixon is in a hell of a mess, and never mind for a minute the question what share of the responsibility be deserves for it. It has now come to the point of apparently serious discussion whether he can take his dogs on Air Force One to California without reimbursing the U.S. government.

As has been pointed out, when this kind of thing was tried on Franklin Delano Roosevelt, he turned it around with withering skill and almost got the best of Westbrook Pegler. I say almost, because where FDR was concerned, the charge was that special trips were authorized exclusively for the sake of Pala. It has not been alleged that Air Force One was specially dispatched for the sake of picking up King Timahoe. Merely that the setter rode in the airplane. I do not believe Cotton Mather would have found anything immoral to this, but Nixon's critics, having tuned up, find it easier to bay through the night than to use restraint in anything involving Nixon. There is a congressman on the Judiciary Committee, a "hardlin-er" is bow the morning's paper identifies him. He is angry at what be considers the contuma-cious conduct of President Nixon. What is it this time? Well, Nixon wants until April 22 to band over the tapes requested by the committee. Nixon's lawyer says, mind you, that he is making no com-mitment to hand over all those tapes at that time. View of IRS

I have read and heard plenty of criticism of Nixon and his tax attorneys in regard to the President's tax returns for 1969 to 1972 but I have yet to hear any criticism of the Internal Revenue Service. Apparently the IRS saw nothing wrong with Nixon's return until year: later when Watergate and related matters prompted them to play the role of carrion crow,

The myth of the IRS heing unbiased is now completely exploded for it is obvious that they are just as politically motivated and dominated ar other government departments and agencies. STEWART L FRITCHIE. Kronberg Taunus, W. Germany, ment, rather, is to hand over those tapes . which Nixon feels relate directly to the Watergate controversy:

If Nixon was prepared to hand over the tapes without any quallfication, obviously there would be no point in waiting until April 22. He could as well hand them over this morning. What the congressman is saying, in other words, is that the White House has no right to pass independent judgment over whether these tapes refer in any way to Watergate. The attitude of presumptive distrust is very nearly Nixon goes to France, to attend the memorial services of Georges Pompidou. And while he is there, he occupies himself with meetings with the heads of state assembled there. He spends time with everyone possibly excluding the 11-year-old son of King Hassan II. Everyone agrees that U.S. relations with Europe are in disrepair. Everyone agrees that it is a matter of the highest priority that America should do some-thing about it. But all of a sudden a critical community which is not known for the accent lt puts on showing reverence for the remains of Georges Pompidou, may be rest in peace, finds it profane that Nixon should take the opportunity to talk about the problems of the living.

I cannot imagine that this criticism would have been leveled at Dwight Eisenhower, or John Kennedy, or even Lyndon John-son. The tone, on the contrary, would have been altogether approving: "President at Pompidou Rites/Seeks European Accord."

And lots of approving editorish Take the Russian trip. Everyone is ready to criticize it. I su ready to criticize it, but so help me I was just as ready before Watergate, because it is my conviction that America has been morally fleeced by the Comminis world during Nixon's reign But tha people who were elated at Nixon's discovery of the joys of life under Chairman Mao, and who congratulated Nison most heartily for his conclusion of the SALT accords wherein we spreed lika little gentlemen to military inferiority, are now putting Nixon in a position where he literally can't win.

Soviet Deal

If he drives a bargain that 6 good for America, the 50th Union will balk: and Nixon critics will say that the Sorie Union can't do business with Nixon because he is playing. the fleeted phrase of Sen. Jarix. "impeachment politics." He being tough on the Soviet Union —they will say—to impress the guys back home. On the other hand, if he does make a deal with the Soviet Union, they will st that he is so anxious to score he is ready to give the Souls Union the Marine Band, so 15 th be able to come back victorious The tragedy is that there is no apparent escape from this rul The position of the critics is to nearly adamant, and Nixon ha made too many political and psychological mistakes. It is to reason why men of true vision sit less concerned now with individual ual justice than with the wir being of the Republic.

U.S., Britain, West Germany Plan a Common Tank Cannon

By John W. Finney

-RAMSTEIN AIR BASE, Germany April 17 NYT .—The United States, West Germany and Britain in air effort to overcome one of the military weaknesses of Western alliance, have agreed upon the competitive election of a common gun for their tanks, American officials announced yesterday.

United States defense officials have also made it clear to the European allies that they are prepared to go a significant step farther in standardizing weapons by considering the competitive development of a common tank for the alliance.

Representatives of the countries signed the agreement en the standard tank gun in Washington Monday. The an-mouncement yesterday coincided with the arrival here of Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger en what he described as a Frevivalist mission" to remrigorate the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

6-Day Visit

During his six-day visit, Mr. Schlesinger will also inspect U.S. Mr. Schlesinger said a reduction Army and Air Force units and of U.S. troops would only be posvisit NATO military commanders, a common tank gun is intended to reassure the European allies that the United States is ready to put aside some ef the nationalistic pressures that have dominated weaponry programs by showing a willingness to buy a

As envisioned by American officials, the step could also help relieve a major supply problem in a NATO alliance in which each ally insists upon maintaining its owo separate weapon systems. Low Crime Rate in Tokyo Reflects Love of Orderliness

By Sydney H. Schanberg ly fond of contrasting their crime

TORYO, April 17 NYT .-People in Tokyo rarely cross the street against a red light. They do not scrawi graffiti au subway walls. And they do not commit many murders either.

Indeed, the world's most populous city—11.6 million people has the lowest crime rate. Tokyo had 196 morders last year. New work, with a population of ai-most 8 million, had 1,680—nearly nine times as many.

That Japan's capital is the least crime troubled of any big news. Tourist brochures regularly make the same point: "Eren on dark, lonely streets in the dead of night, you need not be alread of lurking shadows."

But seldom does anyone here by to explain why, for lew and order are conditions of life the Japanese have come to take for granted.

Complex Question

Though the "why" is not some Oriental mystery, neither is it simple to explain, for it involves mixture of social and legal factors that go to the heart of the national character.

The gun-control and drug laws are severe, and they are enforced by an efficient police ferce. Public respect for law and authority is traditionally strong. A-rest :s & deep disgrace, both for oncself and fer one's family. The level of education is high. Unemployment is low. Pinally, the Japanese, hving close together on an iso ated and densely populated island group, have developed an ability to deal with stresses and an adaptability lo others, as well as a sense of In es of their neighbors.

THe 19th-century chef, J. Rouyer, may have been, as Alexandre Dumas testified, "an excellent cook," but his poetry was indigestible. His works include a lengthy poem on the cherry, which hegins thus: Les gobets de Montmorency Sont originaires d'Asie Ce truit rouge du cerisier. Fut importé de Chérisonte Par Lucullus, gourmand-querrier Lequel (l'histoire le reconte) Pour la cerise, en sa saison Alla combattre Mithridate. Ro!, iameux mangeur de poison! (The goods of Montmorency Rouyer was no better as a historian than as a poet. He was echoing a legend when he credited Luculius with having imported the cherry from Cerasonte in Cappadocia, Lucullus, a soldier as well as a gourmet, did indeed lead an army against Mithridates. with indifferent success, but it was not for the sake of the cherry, it was in the interests of Roman policy.

The story that he gave the cherry to Italy is still repeated today, though it was contradicted as long ago as AD 200, hy Atinenseus. It is true that it rested upon the redouhtable authority of Pliny, who asserted that the cherry took its name (in Latin ceresia for the fruit, ceresus for the tree: from Cerasonie, where Lucullus had won a hartle. Actually it comes from the Greek kerases, a word which antedates

The first cherries eaten by the Greeks were wild ones; they did not much care for them, and with reason, for they were small, hitter and hard. The cherry grew wild not only in Greece, but also in Italy and Gaul, for as far heek as the records go. It was alread; being cultivated at the dawn of Italian history by the Etruscans so, though Lucullus may possibly have brought some special variety of cherry from Asia Minor, necertainly did not introduce the first cherries.

Before his time Romans doted on the ccrasum Apronianum, who had developed it, Apronius of Phersnachs (today Perugia). However, the best cherries in the ancient world, in Roman opinion, were not grown on Etruscan ter-ritory, but just north of it (the Etruscans would eventually annex it) at what is today Vignola, near Modena. Italians will tell you that the world's best cherries are still grown there-between 45 million and 60 million pounds a

If Vignola is not the best cherry producing region, then the eastern shore of Lake Michigan is. The climate induced by the presence of a large lake seems to have a beneficial influence on cherries; the best in Germany are grown on the shores of Lake Constance. The cherry was so familiar so early that it must have seemed commonplace to historians, who onsequently have not told us nuch about it. It emerges only occasionally from obscurity.

Cherries were taken to America by some of the earliest European settlers, who might have spared themselves the trouble, for the cherry already existed there. However, American and European cherries are of different types, so the result is that America today has two sets of wild cherries and two sets of domesticated cherries. which developed in opposite alrections; the American cherry, which was wild when the Europeans arrived, was soon cultivated, while the European cherry, a cultivated variety when it was introduced, escaped from cultivation and reverted to its wild state. The most celebrated appearance of the cherry in American folklore is of course the story of George Washington; oral tradition has handed it down in terms a little less nauseatingly saccharine than those of Parson Weems, who invented it. In his "The Life of George Washington: With Curious Anecdotes, Equally Honorable to Himself and Exemplary to His Young Countrymen," Weems

"George," said his father, "do you know who killed that beautiful little cherry tree yonder m the garden?" ... Looking at his father with the sweet face of youth brightened with the inexpressible charm of all-conquering truth, he bravely cried out, "I can't tell a lie. I did cut it with my hatchet."

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Norway Strikes North Sea Oil Norway has made a big oil strike in its section of the North Sea. The government oil directorate says the operator, Mobil Exploration, Norway, has carried out tests of its first well in the Breot field, northwest of Bergen, showing a maximum daily production of 10.560 barrels. Experis say the Brent field could have bigger potential than the Ekolisk field, operated by the Phillips group, which is expected to bave s production of almost 19 million tons by 1980. So far tests indicate that the new oil resources do not cross the dividing line into the British section of the North Sea. The government state-oil company holds 50 percent of the shares in Mobil Exploration Norway, the operator 15 percent. Conoco Norge 10, Esso Exploration Norge 10, A.S.

Bank of America has carried out a restructuring of its wholesale banking operations that consolidates global services into a single management unit. The reorganization includes the immediate activation of a newly structured European division with headquarters in London. BankAmerica says the European and North American units are the first to be consolidated. The Asian and Latin American divisions will be brought into the new structure later. The bank says Europe is its most important single overseas market, and the activation of the newly structured European division is a recognition of the potential for future expansion both in London and on the Continent.

NEW YORK, April 17 (AP),-The old 10 percent record level of the prime rate of U.S. banks was passed by more banks today. Union Bank of Los Angeles raised its prime rate to 10 1 4 percent from the 10 percent mark, effective immediately. Citizens & Southern National Bank of Atlanta said it has posted a 10 1, 2 percent rate on new loans given to its best corporate customers, while increasing to 10 1 4 percent interest on previous loans.

On Monday, North Carolina National Bank snnounced its prime had increased to 10 1 4 percent. as did Bank of California late yesterday. The nation's 10thlargest commercial bank, First National Bank of Chicago, bas a base minimum corporate rate now of 10.10 percent.

Money market analysts cautiousis expect other banks to join the movement through the old 10 percent barrier unless there is a change in policy by the Federal Reserve Board.

Income Growth Slows in U.S.

WASHINGTON, April 17 IAP-DJ:.-The growth in U.S. personsl income in March alowed slightly from February, the Commerce

Department reported today. Personal income last month climbed S5.1 hillion, or 0.5 percent, to a seasonally-adjusted annual rate of $1,100 billion from an upward-revised $1,095 hillion in February, when income rose $7.8 billion, or 0.7 percent.

It was the second month in a row that personal income had accelerated, following January's rare downturn.

The February increase in personal income originally reported as $6.6 hillion, or 0.6 percent, was revised to reflect additional data, the Commerce Department said.

Am. Express Agrees to Allow Discounts for Cash Payments

-Discounts of as much as 6 percent for cash-paying customera in shops may now become available under terms of a landmark settlement of a suit brought by Consumers Union against American Express Co. The out-of-court agreement today follows a CU allegation that American Express prohibited merchants accepting its card from offerlog discounts to cashpaying customers.

The auit. filed on Feb. 20 hy the nonprofit consumer organization, alleged that the arrangement was in violatioo of federal antitrust laws. While not acknowledging any violations of law. American Express agreed to notify more than $7,000 merchants accepting the American Express card that they are now free to give discounts for cash payments.

The possibility of discounts of up to 6 percent is based on the fact that merchants who accept the Americao Express card must pay the credit card company a service charge ranging from 2 to 6 percent of the sale price. The savings on the service charge to cash-paying customers could he passed oo as a discount to the

and headed strongly upward."

Excerpts From Report to Shareholders by Cornell C. Maier, President and Chief Executive Officer

● 1973 was a strong year in almost all our major business lines. Net sales reached and surpassed the $1 billion mark for the first time in our history, rising almost $300 million from the 1972 level and totalling $1.28 billion.

Our earnings turned around in 1973 and appear to be headed strongly upward. Net income was $44.5 million or $2.17 a common share, up from 1972's depressed level of $15 million or $.62 a common share. In recognition of our improved earnings and more favourable outlook, Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical's board of directors in February increased the quarterly common stock dividend by 50%, from 12½ cents a share to 18¾ cents a share.

Aluminium demand and shipments were at all-time highs in 1973, but governmental price restraints inhibited profitability and prevented our aluminium operations from gaining the maximum return possible during the year. Nevertheless, an improved product mix and slightly higher prices for aluminium products did bring about substantial gains from the 1972 level. Additional increases in aluminium earnings are expected this year.

Our 1973 equity earnings from international aluminium affiliates were up sharply, due in large measure to improved profits of Comalco Ltd., our 45%-owned Australian affiliate. Directly or through affiliates and subsidiaries, we participate in aluminium production, fabrication, and other activities in 26 countries throughout the world. In late 1973, we acquired in full an aluminium can manufacturing facility at Recklinghausen, Germany. This plant, formerly 50% owned, is the only facility in Western Europe capable of producing two-piece seamless aluminium beverage cans. Plans to expand its capacity by about 70% and increase supplies to the area's expanding soft drink and beer industries were recently announced.

• Sales and earnings of our diversified activities in 1973 far surpassed the levels of any prior year. Our refractories, industrial chemicals, and agricultural chemicals divisions all achieved record profits, as did our commodities trading group, The Kaiser Trading Company. We are expanding these important elements of our organization: two additional U.S. refractories plants were acquired in March, 1974; both the industrial and agricultural chemicals divisions are increasing their production capacities; Kaiser Trading in 1973 opened new offices in Singapore, Montreal and Frankfurt and broadened the range of its commodities trading activities.

◆ While costs will rise in 1974, we anticipate further significant gains in earnings. U.S. aluminium shipments will be down from 1973's record level, but metal will remain in relatively tight supply and we expect to ship all the aluminium we can produce. Continued strong results from our diversified activities will contribute to the expected rise in 1974 profitability.

To receive our 1973 annual report, please complete and mail this coupon. If you like, we'll also send along our 24-page, four-colour "Profile," a new general information book available in English, French, and German that describes our role in the various industries in which we participate.

have is an extraordinary achievement. The book was begun in the early 1930s, and worked on intermittently until 1936 or 1937. A few sketches appeared in print during this period, and then The manuscript of "Yonnondio" was set aside while Mrs. Olsen began to take on "everyday jobs" and raise a family. There was no time to write: "The simplest circumstances for creation did not exist," she has said in a speech entitled "Death of the Creative Process." Nor did they exist for another 20 years: "Always roused by the writing, always denied.

Her work died. "What demanded to be written, did not; it seethed, bubbled alamand bubbled, clamored, peopled me."
Finally, in the mid-50s, from the stolen moments on a bus, a job, after the children were asleep, a publishable story, then two more and, in 1961, "Tell Me a Riddle." recipient of the O. Henry Award as the best short story of the year. And then, only a couple of years ago, nearly 40 years after their creation, a pile of papers, segments of the novel long thought lost or destroyed, are found among other papers from the past. Four chapters—the first four-are in final or near-final form; the rest consists of drafts, fragments, penciled notes. But no new writing is done, no rewriting; only combinings and reconstruction. The manuscript as published is unfinished, but as Mrs. Olsen writes in "A Note About This Book," "Yonnondio," conceived primarily as a novelof the 1930s, "yet bespeaks the consciousness and roots of that decade, if not its events,"

The "events" begin in a small mining town in Wyoming during the 1920s: "The whistles always woke Mazie. They pierced into her sleep like some guttural-voic-ed metal beast, tearing at her; breathing a terror." When the terror becomes too much, when the despair of an existence so close to the bowels of the earth makes Jim and Annie Holbrook bitter and brutal, they move with their children, Mazie and Ben, to a land which in their dream "stretched into mist, in which one figure tiny as a toy, plowed a hlack thread in a square of brown." But the farm is no better; the land is not theirs. And so, when the ground grows hard and unyielding, another move, this time to the big industrial city with its "Human smells, crotch and underarm sweat, the smell of cooking or of burning, all are drowned under, merged into the vast unmoving stench. The struch is always there-Jim works in the sewers, Annie gives birth and tries to hold her family together, and the children struggle to endure in a world in which dreams float in pain.

The story ends abruptly. It is a book of 191 pages; hardly more than a novella. Only fragments remain to tell us what might have been. "Yonnondio! Yon-nondio!" Walt Whitman wrote— "unlimn'd they disappear." So it

TTILLE OLSEN'S "Yonnondio" is with Mrs. Olsen's novel is unfinished, but what we loss is great. Yet, for all that we do not have, "Younondio" elegity must take its place as the beg novel to come out of the socalled proletarian mor the 30s. The dogma and stitety characterizations that deferm to the provels of that was a little to the provels of that was a little provels of that was a little provels of the provels o many of the novels of that period have no place in Tille Oker writing. She is a const artist who, in a paragraph such; the following one about the of a miner, demonstrates just he searingly successful "protest" will ing can be: "Someday the bores (of the earth) will grow mon strous and swollen with these o tired dreams, swell and break an strong fists batter the fat belie and skeletons of starved childre batter them, and perhaps y will be slugged by a thug bird by the fat bellies, Andy Krate, nick. Or death will take you bed at last, or you will strang with that old crony of mine the asthma." I know of no wor that "bespeaks the consciousnes and roots" of the 1930s as by liantly as "Yonnondio."

But it would be a terrible mi take to see "Yonondio" as a von limited to, and bound by, the 30 Mrs. Olsen's richness of style, he depth of characterization, and her enormous compassion make "Yonnondio" a work which mes not—cannot—be restricted by any particular time or period. Its publication simply reinforce what we already know from Tel Me a Riddle": Tillie Olsen is one of the greatest prose stylists now writing. One can only think ruefully of what might have beg had she not been "denied full writing life"—had those 40 year been hers, and so ours, not years of "unnatural thwarting of what struggles to come into being but cannot." Mrs. Olsen is mitright when she says (again, in "Death of the Creative Process" that a writer cannot be reconciled for what is lost by unnatural silences." "Yonnondio! Younondio! The word itself a dirge," wrote Whitman. "Then blank and gone and still, and utterly lost." But now, with the publication of the found manuscriptunfinished as it may be-we as say: At least not that—not ut-terly lost. "Yonnondio" is a magnificent novel, one to be all the more cherished for the diruption it makes into the unmit ural silence of Tillie Olsen.

Leading high from a doubleton another table. West correctly is the standard procedure, and is the spade deuce rather than the almost always satisfactory. But a doubleton trump lead represents an exception. This was demonstrated in the diagramed deal played during the open pairs of the recent Spring National championships in Vancouver.

When the combined partnership hands have only 25 highcard points, as in this case, a sound siam contract is hard to reach. It is not a freak deal, since there are no unusually long suits, but every high card and both singletons pull their full weight.

South and North employed the Precision System effectively. The opening one-chib bid promised 16 points or more, and the positive response of two clubs showed 8 or more. As North was limited by his original pass, he could afford to respond to two spades with a jump to four dismonds. This was a splinter bid. showing a good spade fit and at most a singleton diamond.

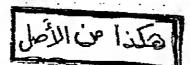

South could judge immediately that the situation in spades and diamonds was ideal for slam purposes, A series of cue-bids showed him that North held the right cards in cluhs and hearts, so he bid the slam.

The play was easy enough after the lead of the spade eight. The declarer had four tricks coming to him in the side-suits, and had no difficulty in cross-ruffing to make another eight. But at

New League Catches Its 25th NFL Player

By Gorald Eskenazi

NEW YORK, April 17 (NYT), the Virginia Ambassadors and The World Football League snared its 25th National Football League player yesterday by per-suadiog Daryle Lamonica to leave the Oakland Ralders after his option year is finished this coming season

Thus, the Raiders in a week lost their top two quarterbacks. Earlier, Ken Stabler, No. 1 last season, agreed to join Birmingham ln 1976. Lamonica, who threw more touchdown passes between 1967 and 1972 than any other NFL quarterback, signed a multi-year pact with the Southern California Suu. The Sun will play its home games in Anaheim Stadium. The immediate reaction from Oakland, winner of the American Conference's Western Division title last season, was ont of muted suffering.

A club official admitted: "We'll be going with two quarterbacks ln limbo. It's too early to tell -t sort of morale effect this will have on the club." The question of morale in the

"Mr. Doar, this is James St. Clair. How's everything on the Hill? "Just fine, Mr. St. Clair. What's new at the White House that we should know about?"

"That's what I'm calling about. You guys didn't have to send us a subpoena. We promised we'd cooperate with you fully. When you voted a subpoena it made it sound as if we were dragging our feet."

"I know." "Now look, Doar. We want to he reasonable down here, and we're willing to give you everything you've asked for." "Tou are?"

"Yes, with the only exception that it doesn't harm the presidency or violate the Constitution. As Mr. Nixon's lawyer I believe I'm in the best position to know what is relevant to your impeach-ment hearings. I've sifted through every plece of evidence. and I give you my word a int of the stuff you're renuesting is not worth fighting for."

"How do we know that if we haven't beard the tapes?"

"I heard them, and the President's heard them, and H.R. Haldeman's heard them. Why can't you take our word for it that there is absolutely nothing on them that can contribute to Mr. Nixon's impeachment? What nn earth would we have to gain hy keeping evidence from your committee?

"I'm certain, Mr. St. Clair, that what you say is true. But there are some members of the com-going to turn them over to us?" "That's what I'm calling about. We're willing to give you 42 tapes as requested.

"Then we don't have a proh-

"But the President feels he should have the right to decide what 42 tapes to give you. That's only fair." "I don't get you."

The President is offering instead of the Kleindienst telephone conversation of April 15 a tape of his call to congratulate Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins winning the Super Bowl. The President says it's a much jazzier tape and he's sure the entire House committee would enjoy it.

He is also offering in place nf his conversations with Haldeman and Ehrlichman on April 16, 1973, the complete unedited tape of his talk with David Eisenhower on Feb. 12, 1969. He would also like to substitute for the Colson material you've requested a tape of a very funny nieeting he had in the Oval Office with Miss Cherry Blossom

"To show his good faith the President has authorized me to turn over to you the tapes of all the prayer breakfasts at the White House, as well as a complete tape of Feari Bailey singing 'When the Saints Go March-

"Purthermore, he is throwing in a tape of a personal message he dictated to Secretariat when he won the Triple Crown.

"He feels these tapes are something the Hnuse could play over and over again. Believe me, Mr. Doar, the ones you people have asked for are dull and repetitious, and you'd be bored to death. The ones we're offering you would give you hours of listening pleasure."

"Thanks, Mr. St. Clair, but po thanks. We still want the tapes we asked for." "Okay Doar. The President asked me to give you a mes-sage if you refused his generous offer. What is that?" "He told me to tell you, "That does it. No more Mr. Nice Boys Town Has an Embarrassment of Riches

By Douglas E. Kneeland

POYS TOWN, Neb. (NYT).—Somehow, 36 years ago, when Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney were running the place, it did not seem likely that the biggest problem at Boys Town would ever be an embarrassment of riches,

They sort of scuffed along from hand to mouth in those days and what they scraped together they seemed to find no end of useful

Over the years since, Boys Town, a nonsectarian home for homeless, neglected and underprivileged boys aged 10 to 18, has developed the art of raising money to a fine point. Its current net worth is more than $226 million, most of which is in a rapidly growing endowment fund that was a virtual secret until two years ago.

Somewhere along the line, the institution lost the knack of generating worthy causes as fast as it did wealth. But, faced with mounting questions about what it was doing with all that money and a sharp drop in contributions, Boys Town, which now has a new director, is moving quickly to spend a substantial part of its accumulated millions.

New Commitments

Within the last year or so, it has committed itself to the establishment of an Institute for the Study and Treatment of Hearing and Speech Disorders in Children and three branches of a Center for the Study of Youth Development. Now, it is planning to set up a network of halfway houses in cities across the country for Boys Town graduates who have no homes to return to as they try to make the transition back to the outside world.

The professional staff is being expanded rapidly, deteriorating buildings are being remodeled and regulations and programs at the institution are being altered drastically to provide a more homelike atmosphere for the boys.

For most people old enough to have seen Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's movie "Boys Town," or its sequel and perhaps for many who may have caught them on television, the City of Little Men has always been frozen in time. Back in 1938, Father Flanagan (that was Spencer Tracy) swallowed his Irish pride hard and begged and borrowed a lot and did a fair amount of praying just to get by.

Maybe that's not exactly how it was, but in memory that's how it's always seemed. For Boys Town, that was just fine.

Mailing Lists

Every Christmas, millions of letters with the Boys Town postmark were dispatched to people on mailing lists across the country. Bearing idealized pictures of a enowy campus and a smiling youngster carrying a sleeping smalle boy on his back ("He ain't heavy . . the letters usually began with something like, "There will be no joyous Christmas season this year for many homeless and forgotten boys to look forward to with eager anticipation as the more fortunate

At Easter another set of mailings would go out, part of the more than 30 million solicitation letters prepared each year by scores of women working for the Boys Town fund-raising apparatus in an old five-story bullding in downtown Omaha. The letters ask recipients to send "$1, $2, $5, or any amount you

And the contributions kept rolling in totaling-more than $18 million in 1971. In that year, total income, including return on investments, was about $35 million, some four times the annual expenses. Then, at the end of March, 1972, the Sun Newspapers of Omaha, a weekly group, published an eight-page section entitled, "Boys Town, America's Wealthiest City?" The articles, which were awarded a Pulitzer Prize in 1973 for special local reporting, asserted that Boys Town had developed a "money machine" that hy that time had produced a net worth of more than $209 million.

Net Worth

Working from figures in a 1970 report filed by Boys Town with the Internal Revenue Service, the Sun Newspapers concluded that based on census figures of that year of 993 people at Boys Town, which is also an incorporated village, the community had a net worth of more than $190,000 a person.

Shortly after the disclosures, Msgr. Nicholas H. Wegner, who on the death of Msgr. Edward T. Flanagan in 1948, succeeded the man who founded the institution in 1917, offered a frank explanation:

"In the 24 years I have been the director, I've tried in every possible way to increase the amount of money Boys Town receives, with the help of the Morgan Guaranty Trust Company of New York."

Msgr. Wegner who had watched Father Flanagan's financial struggles over the years and who had inherited some of the debt from $10-million building program undertaken not long before the founder's death, also remarked, "We're a social agency, but social welfare has to be run as a business."

But an aroused public kept asking why Boys Town, which had done little building in years and had a dwindling population as trends in the care of homeless or problem children shifted from institutionalization to placement in foster homes, felt the need for continued fund-raising when it could live off its investments and other

Fund Appeals Dropped

So fund appeals were abruptly dropped in the latter part of 1972. That year contributions fell off to about $3.6 million from about $18.3 million the year before.

A company of outside experts was also hired in 1972 to determine how Boys Town could improve its operations and to suggest other ways in which it might contribute to troubled youngsters.

During that year, the institution announced plans to put up $30 million for the Boys Town Institute for the Study and Treatment of Hearing and Speech Disorders in Children, to be established at nearby Creighton University, and $40 million for three branches of a Boys Town Center for the Study of Youth Development.

The youth study centers, which will conduct research on such problems as rejection of parents, drug addiction, antisocial behavior and inability to learn, will be on the 1,700-acre campus here, at Catholic University in Washington and at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif.

Last October, Archbishop Sheehan named the Rev. Robert F. Hupp, a popular 58-year-old Omaha parish priest, to replace the ailing 75-year-old Msgr. Wegner, who retired. Since then things have hardly been the same for the 640 boys and 730 staff members on the sprawling campus, which has more than 50 buildings, including a modern high school, elementary school, vocational school, a fieldhouse that would do justice to most colleges, a 2.600-seat music hall and a 900-acre farm.

Indeed, change has been so swift that a lot of the old hands have been in almost open rebellion, but Father Hupp, smiling benignly, insists that "one by one, they're coming around." Leaning back in his chair and discussing the changes that are taking place, he added:

"We've got enough money to do things and we're going to do them because they're so long overdue. I don't see any point in delaying just for the sake of delay. Besides, it's a lot harder to hit a moving target."

155 YEARS OLD-Although their combined ages add ap to 155 years, both Martha Graham, left, born in 1894 and Gloria Swanson, born in 1899, are still active in the theater. Here Miss Swanson is congratulating Miss Graham on her return to the Broadway stage Mouday night with her modern dance troupe. Miss Graham did not dance but she did a commentary. $1 Million Paperback Rights to Watergate Book

Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward, The Washington Post investigative reporters, have sold paperback reprint rights to their book about Watergate, "All the President's Men," for $1 million. Their share in the sale is about half the full amount, with their hardcover publishers, Simon and Shuster receiving an equal share The sale, to Warner Paperback Library, is a record-setter, in financial terms, for a book that has not yet appeared in hardhack. Other books have earned $1 million for paperback rights, but they were already runaway best sellers when the deal was made. Sources in the publishing industry said Tuesday that Bernstein and Woodward would probably each realize $1 million from their book. They have sold movie rights for $450,000, most of

Mrs. Borah Lipsky of Wantagh, N.Y., confirmed Tuesday that her 23-year-old daughter, Helene, was married more than two weeks ago to Bonald Nixon, President Nixon's nepher. The wedding took place in Costa Rica, where the 27-year-old Nixon works for Robert Vesco, the fugitive financier. Vesco was named a co-defendant, with Maurice Stans and John Mitchell, in an indictment charging obstruction of justice in connection with alleged

Rhode Island has won a county judgment against the Columb Broadcasting System. Vieter Costa says that he, not CR created the character Palane played by Richard Boone, and the essential ideas that CBS use in its successful TV series, "But Gun, Will Travel." The US magistrate did not specify the amount of money to be paid not any only that the default. ing only that the defendant must pay De Costa "the proceed of their wrong." Testimony giver during the trial reports Richard Severo of The New York Time, indicated that CBS grossed the million from the show. Then was also more money carned by 32 licensees who produced a Pab. din outfit and a calling card the said, "have gun, will travel. Wire Paladin, San Francisco."

De Costa, who hears a striking resemblance to Boone, claims that he was in every way the character Boone played. In the late 1940s and 1950s. De Com said that he gave out thousand of his "have gun will trave" cards at horse shows in New England. He also used the name
